 When the form is completed and signed by you, return the original form to PEPP.

Designating a beneficiary is an important decision, so please take the time to review this form and make the correct decision for your situation. Most jurisdictions in Canada require that your spouse is your beneficiary provided they have not waived their rights. For clarification on designation of beneficiary, go to the PEPP website and read the PEPP Talk on Designation of Beneficiary.

There are two ways you can designate multiple beneficiaries, which are outlined below (please select one)

I am designating my beneficiaries as :

- Joint Designation - you are designating more than one beneficiary. You do not indicate a percentage. If you die, the survivor benefit will be shared among the living beneficiaries who you have listed in equal portions.

OR

- In-common Designation - you are designating more than one beneficiary. You must state what percentage each individual will receive. If any of the beneficiaries pre-decease you, their share can be distributed in three ways.

- their share will go to their descendents (e.g., children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren).
- their share shall be divided amongst the other surviving beneficiaries (pro-rated based on their entitlement).
- their share will go to my Estate.

Spouse Beneficiary Types

If you have a spouse, that person is your beneficiary of 100 per cent of the survivor benefit. Unless they waive all or a portion of the survivor benefit.

You must choose a beneficiary type of "Specified Spouse" or "Spouse" to determine how your PEPP is managed in the event of your death.

Specified Spouse:

If you wish for your spouse to receive 100 per cent of the benefit and be able to remain in the VPB uninterrupted after your death, name your spouse as a specified beneficiary.

Your spouse will have several options and the time to choose how to handle the VPB account, or to just continue receiving payments from it until it is depleted. Only the spouse of the member can be a specified beneficiary. Specified beneficiary receives 100 per cent of the survivor benefit – no sharing.

Spouse:

Choose "Spouse" if your spouse will not be continuing the VPB account after your death or if your spouse is sharing the survivor benefit (has waived rights to all or a portion of benefit). This will allow you to designate all or a portion of the benefit to a beneficiary(ies) other than your spouse. If your spouse waives rights to all of the benefit show the portion waived. To waive these benefits your spouse must complete a Spouse's Waiver of Designated Beneficiary Status form from our website and submit it to PEPP. Please see the PEPP Talk on Variable Pension Benefit for more information on beneficiary(ies).
